

WHEN MCKINLEY COMES

He will be Honored by such a Demonstration

AS WHEELING NEVER SAW BEFORE.

The Arrangement of Companies in the Line so Far as they are Known. Republicans should Decorate their Houses and make the Day Memorable—Pittsburgh will Send a Small Army of its Own—General Orders.

To-morrow is McKinley day, and that it will be "a hummer" there is no longer any question. Fair weather is all that is required to make it the largest political demonstration that has ever taken place in the Ohio Valley.

The number of uniformed marching clubs that have so far signified their intention of being here is a surprise to even the most enthusiastic of the committee having the affair in charge and the probabilities are that fully three thousand men will be in line. As before stated, the railroads will run a number of special trains and carry the visitors at very low rates. The Baltimore & Ohio, for instance, will bring the McKeesport folks down on specials for $1.50 for the round trip, from Pittsburgh $1.35, and from Washington 65 cents, tickets good returning for three days.

Secretary M. H. McNabb returned from Pittsburgh yesterday morning, where he has been for the past few days working up the demonstration at that point, and that he met with success will be seen from the list of uniformed marchers from Pittsburgh, Allegheny and vicinity printed below. That there will be enough music in the parade may be judged from the number of bands coming, and every one of them is a number one musical organization.

Notwithstanding the parade is not to take place until evening, the following clubs will arrive from the Smoky City about noon: The American Club, Chas. L. Magee Guards (Six-Footers), Conkling Republican Club, General Republican Club, of Allegheny, and the Allegheny Republican Cadets.

All of these organizations, with the exception of one, will be accompanied by a band. They will be met at the train by the Young Men's Escort club and escorted to the Republican Central headquarters on Market street, where a substantial lunch will be served. To arrange for this all Republican ladies were possibly can will please attend a meeting in the parlors of the McClure house this morning at 11 o'clock. It is the duty of every lady who can to be there.

Governor McKinley will arrive on a special from Charleston on the Ohio River road shortly after noon, and will begin his speech on the fair grounds at 2 o'clock. The Young Men's Escort and the visiting clubs will escort him over and back.

In the evening the clubs will assemble on Fourteenth street, right of first division resting on Woods street, etc., as printed in Chief Marshal Baguley's general orders in Saturday morning's INTELLIGENCER. After the parade has been formed the column will counter-march down Fourteenth to Market, then north on Market to Seventh, west on Seventh to Main, south on Main to Twenty-fourth, east on Twenty-fourth to Chapline, south on Chapline to Thirty-sixth, east on Thirty-sixth to Woods, north on Woods to Thirty-third, west on Thirty-third to Eoff, north on Eoff to Twenty-fourth, west on Twenty-fourth to Chapline, north on Chapline to Twentieth, west on Twentieth to market, north on Market to Fourteenth, where the column will pass in review.

The clubs will be in line as follows:

FIRST DIVISION.
Chris L. Magee Guards (Six-Footers), of Pittsburgh—Captain Dr. A. J. Barchfield.
Chief Marshal H. B. Baguley and staff.
Division Commander William Travis and staff.
Great Army Band of Pittsburgh—20 men.
American Club, Pittsburgh, Major S. B. Hubley in command—150 men.
Conkling Club, Pittsburgh, Captain D. A. McDonald—50 men.
Great Western Band, Pittsburgh—40 men.
General Republican Club, Allegheny—110 men.
Allegheny Republican Cadets—50 men.
Cathedral Band, Pittsburgh—20 men.
Eleventh Ward Republican Club, Pittsburgh, Captain J. A. A. Brown—100 men.
Fourteenth Ward Republican Club, James McKnight—50 men.
Tariff Cadets, Pittsburgh, Captain Harry S. Finburg—68 men.
Electric Band, McKeesport—25 men.
Union Republican Club, McKeesport, Captain Emory Thompson—125 men.
Military Drum Corps.
Young Men's Republican Club, Mansfield, Captain R. E. Hagan—50 men.

SECOND DIVISION.
Division Marshal Richard Robertson and aides.
Washington Cornet Band—15 men.
Young Men's Republican Club, Washington, Pa.—100 men.
Washington-Jefferson College Republican Club—100 men.
Colored Republican Club, Washington, Pa.—125 men.
Claysville, Pa., Drum Corps.
Claysville Republican Club.
West Alexander Republican Club.

Richie District Drum Corps.
Richie District Republican Club.
Mayer's Band.
Centre District Republican Club, Capt. W. W. Rogers.
Webster District Republican Club.
Other local Republican clubs.
Mounted clubs, citizens in carriages, vehicles, etc., etc.

To the above and all other organizations and to the division marshals and aides the following order will be issued by the chief marshal this morning:

HEADQUARTERS OF MCKINLEY DEMONSTRATION, WHEELING, W. VA., Oct. 17.
General Order No. 2.
The following rules in relation to mounted officers will be observed:
1. All officers will wear dark suit, military style, with military coat; all officers will wear sash from right shoulder to left hip. Colors as follows: Chief marshal, white; division marshals, red; all aides, light blue.
2. All clubs are once more requested to communicate immediately with chief of staff the number of men, and time of arrival on night of parade.
By order of Chief Marshal,
JOHN K. LEE,
Chief of Staff.

All citizens should get ready to decorate their homes and places of business at once. Use all the bunting you can get and let the pictures of Harrison, Reid and McKinley occupy conspicuous places. Hang out your decorations early to-morrow morning, that the clubs coming in early will find the town in gay attire.

Almost all the local marching clubs have special meetings to arrange the final details of the big demonstration and all should be attended by every member.

The Republican merchants and manufacturers are requested to fit up their wagons and teams and have them out in the procession. Let every person do all in his power to make McKinley day one that will forever live in the memory of those who witness the demonstration.

The Champions to Meet.
There will be a business meeting of the Tariff Champions this evening at 7 o'clock, sharp. Business of importance will be transacted.
After the meeting there will be a drill on Chapline street. The plumes will be on hand, and can be had at the hall. It is important that every member be on hand in full uniform.

Other Meetings To-night.
The Fifth and Sixth ward Republican clubs are requested to meet at Reid's Hall, corner of Market and Twenty-third, to-night at 7:30, sharp, to make final arrangement for the McKinley meeting. All the colored voters of Ohio county are requested to meet at Market Hall to-night at 8 o'clock.

First Ward Republicans.
There will be a meeting of the Republicans of the First ward this evening at the club room, to make arrangements for the McKinley parade Tuesday evening. Every Republican is requested to attend this meeting.

COLUMBUS COMMEMORATED.

Interesting Services at the Y. M. C. A. Yesterday Afternoon—A Fine Address.

There was a good attendance at the regular Sunday afternoon meeting at the Y. M. C. A. hall yesterday. Secretary J. C. Lynch had charge of the meeting, and made a short address. During the preliminary services a number of patriotic songs were rendered. Rev. Dr. W. H. Cooke delivered an interesting half hour's talk on the life of Columbus and the discovery of America. He spoke of the great events of history as outlined in the Psalms, and deplored the lack of knowledge of the world's history. Columbus, whose life was devoted to the finding of a pathway to India, received a special call for this great work, like the apostle Paul, who went forth to preach the gospel in answer to a call, like Washington, who responded to the call of his country. He seemed to be specially appointed for the work. The one great feature of his life, which was ever prominent in his whole career, was this great work. He resembled Cato in his speeches before the senate in ancient Rome. He always kept uppermost one prominent object, the destruction of Carthage. He reviewed the misfortunes of Columbus's life before he set out for his discovery. In speaking of the fact that Columbus died without knowing that he had discovered a new world, but believing that he had only discovered the pathway across the broad Atlantic to India, he said this did not detract from his greatness. He was guided by four motives in his great work—first, a commercial motive, to enrich Spain and add to its glory; second, a scientific motive, that men might have a better knowledge of the geography of the earth's surface; third, a religious motive, to convert the natives to Christianity; fourth, a romantic motive, to revive the crusades by the wealth obtained by the discoveries.

These motives he illustrated, and he closed by impressing on his hearers the greatness of this country, of which they were stewards in trust, and that their trust should be cared for by earnest work, directed by the hand of God. Dr. Cooke also preached a very eloquent sermon in the evening at the Second Presbyterian church on Columbus and his discoveries.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew.
Probably the brightest comedy organization that will be seen here for many days will appear at the Opera House next Thursday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew will present that gem of all comedies, "That Girl from Mexico," which will be preceded by a delightful one-act comedy, entitled "In Honor Bound." Mr. Drew is a son of Mr. John Drew, and a brother of New York's favorite comedian, John Drew. Mrs. Sidney Drew is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. McKee Rankin.

"My Colleen" To-night.
Tony Farrell, for whom the play, "My Colleen" was written, gives an admirable ideal portrayal of a rollicking brave son of Erin. The character of Jerry Doyle is not at all over drawn. He does not do any of those impossible things too often assigned to Irish heroes, but gives a manly interpretation of his part, added to his Irish wit, Irish character and surroundings. He is said to have a great deal of Hibernian originality, recalling the late Dion Boucicault, but adding to it young and clever acting. Mr. Farrell is equally at home in the pathetic as well as comic requirements of his role, while his singing of several new Irish ballads is most captivating.

SOME ENTERTAINING INTERRUPTIONS.

J. C. Decker, a Democrat connected with the telephone company, had been doing a good deal of talking himself while Senator Hiscock was speaking. For example, he said that Republican legislation had forced the Democratic house to make appropriations exceeding those made by its Republican predecessor. "If you mean the pension list," responded the speaker, "get your party to denounce that in this state; and West Virginia will go Republican by a majority that will overwhelm the Democracy." Then Mr. Decker wanted to know whether the workingman had been more benefited by taking off the sugar duty or by the duty on iron and steel—at least this seemed to be one of the many things he wanted to know, and he was of the opinion that the sugar duty was removed because sugar growing is chiefly a southern industry. Senator Hiscock explained that the sugar duty had been removed because it was not protective and was, therefore, paid by the consumer, but that the Republican party, never a sectional party, had given a bounty as a compensation, and even this had not satisfied the Democrats. Mr. Decker continued to pile in his questions and was never satisfied with his answers, although everybody else seemed to be.

When Senator Hiscock concluded amid great applause, Chairman Hart said that before introducing the next speaker he would give the inquiring Democratic brother who had been dividing time with Senator Hiscock, a chance to repeat a question which he thought the senator had not heard and he would answer that question or any others or frankly confess that he did not know the answer. Mr. Decker came back with his sugar question, and Senator Hiscock asked leave to answer him, which he did, but Mr. Decker was still not entirely happy. Then Chairman Hart gave him a chance to come again, promising that, although he had consumed a good deal more time than would have been allowed at a Democratic meeting, he should have a hearing and an answer.

A ROAD-PLANNER ON HIS MIND.
By this time Mr. Decker had a road-planer question, which was not in fact

SENATOR HISCOCK

His Fine Meeting at the Terminal Station Saturday Night.

A CONVINCING, ELOQUENT SPEECH.

Several Questions Propounded are Answered Promptly and to the Satisfaction of the Audience—A Colored Orator from Ohio also Makes a Strong Argument for Republican Principles.

The Hiscock meeting on Saturday night in the Terminal railway square was a great success and protectionists were correspondingly happy. In the first place the square itself is an ideal spot for a public gathering. A neat stand had been erected on the north front of the railway station, neatly decorated with the national colors and brilliant with the light of many lamps and a big headlight. The square was packed with people—it could have been said that it was black with people if it had not been for the prevalence of the grandfather's hat. It was a splendid night for an outdoor meeting, and it is well that the idea of meeting in a hall was abandoned, for no hall in Wheeling would have held half the crowd that for nearly three hours listened to the speaking.

There was no effort to make a street demonstration, but the Young Men's Republican Escort Club, the Colored Republican Club and the First Ward Republican Club were out in force, burning red fire and marching to the music of Meyer's band and their own drum corps. The streets were lined with people, who interchanged hurrahs for Harrison and Cleveland in a good natured way. Senator Hiscock expressed himself delighted with the audience, its number and its deep interest, and the audience was no less pleased with him. A couple of Democratic brethren, one of them in particular, added much to the zest of the occasion with interruptions.

J. K. Hall, chairman of the county committee, called the meeting to order and proposed Charles Burdett Hart for chairman. The chairman in a few words which brought cheers from the crowd introduced the Hon. Frank Hiscock, senior United States senator from New York. Senator Hiscock has been speaking in Indiana and to large outdoor audiences and feared that his overtaxed voice might fail him; but the further he went the better his voice was. He is a man of size far beyond the average of fine presence and prepossessing bearing. His style is coldly logical and argumentative. He says that he never cracked a joke on the stump in his life, for public questions do not impress him that way. If he had hammered out a joke every second he could not have held his hearers with a tighter grip as he calmly set forth the difference between the two great parties on the questions of protection to American industries and of an honest dollar good everywhere.

TIME TO KEEP THEIR PLEDGE.

He said it was difficult to understand how men could demand protection and vote for free trade. He spoke of West Virginia delegations with others coming to Washington and asking of the Republican senate what had been denied them by the Democratic house, some of the visitors saying that they had voted the Democratic ticket for the last time. He hoped they would now redeem their promise and help to bring their state in line with the policy in which they believe. Somebody wanted to know what about Carnegie. Senator Hiscock said he doubted not that capital in this country may be rapacious, but he wanted to know whether American capital is more grasping than the capital of England, Germany, France or any other country. He wanted to know whether there was less oppression of labor in the old country than here. He said he believed in organized labor and organized capital, and he asserted without fear of contradiction that labor in the United States is better paid than in any other country on the face of the earth—twice as well paid as in the best paying countries in the old world. It has been agreed by a committee of senators, Democrats and Republicans, that labor in this country receives out of every dollar at least forty-four cents more than the best paid labor in the old world receives, and this is an enormous sum that goes straight into the pockets of the workmen of this country. It was not necessary for him to attack or defend Mr. Carnegie. He dealt in the facts and they spoke for themselves. Senator Hiscock discussed the sugar question and dealt the Democracy heavy blows on the proposition to substitute state bank money for the best money the world has seen, good dollar for dollar wherever it goes.

SOME ENTERTAINING INTERRUPTIONS.

J. C. Decker, a Democrat connected with the telephone company, had been doing a good deal of talking himself while Senator Hiscock was speaking. For example, he said that Republican legislation had forced the Democratic house to make appropriations exceeding those made by its Republican predecessor. "If you mean the pension list," responded the speaker, "get your party to denounce that in this state; and West Virginia will go Republican by a majority that will overwhelm the Democracy." Then Mr. Decker wanted to know whether the workingman had been more benefited by taking off the sugar duty or by the duty on iron and steel—at least this seemed to be one of the many things he wanted to know, and he was of the opinion that the sugar duty was removed because sugar growing is chiefly a southern industry. Senator Hiscock explained that the sugar duty had been removed because it was not protective and was, therefore, paid by the consumer, but that the Republican party, never a sectional party, had given a bounty as a compensation, and even this had not satisfied the Democrats. Mr. Decker continued to pile in his questions and was never satisfied with his answers, although everybody else seemed to be.

When Senator Hiscock concluded amid great applause, Chairman Hart said that before introducing the next speaker he would give the inquiring Democratic brother who had been dividing time with Senator Hiscock, a chance to repeat a question which he thought the senator had not heard and he would answer that question or any others or frankly confess that he did not know the answer. Mr. Decker came back with his sugar question, and Senator Hiscock asked leave to answer him, which he did, but Mr. Decker was still not entirely happy. Then Chairman Hart gave him a chance to come again, promising that, although he had consumed a good deal more time than would have been allowed at a Democratic meeting, he should have a hearing and an answer.

A ROAD-PLANNER ON HIS MIND.

By this time Mr. Decker had a road-planer question, which was not in fact much plainer than his other questions, but it gave him keen delight to ask it. By this time the crowd was becoming a little weary of Mr. Decker, but the chairman said he should be indulged awhile longer. Mr. Decker wanted to know if Republicans did not profess to be in favor of admitting free of duty such things as cannot be produced in this country. "Yes," said the chairman, "excepting certain articles of luxury on which we place a duty." Then Mr. Decker remembered that an Ohio man imported a road-planer on which he had to pay a duty, notwithstanding the road-planer could not be made in this country because it was patented. Senator Hiscock desired to reply to this question, saying that perhaps the Republican party had forgotten to put patent road-planers on the free list, and adding that we have the material and the skill to make road-planers in this country and do make them. Mr. Decker desired to run on asking questions, but the chairman said that Mr. Decker had about used up his time, and he would ring him off to answer another question which Senator Hiscock had not heard.

RESTRICTED IMMIGRATION.

While the senator was speaking of the Republican policy which is transferring to this country the tin plate establishments of Wales somebody had asked, "Going to fetch along the men, too?" Mr. Hart said he supposed that question was asked by a Democrat, but Democrat or Republican he would answer it. He asked whether it is not true that the Republican party has given the country all the protection it has, and whether the Democratic party has not at every step opposed that policy. [Voices—"That's so."] "If it be admitted that a restriction to immigration is desirable, as I am sure it is," said Mr. Hart, "to which party will you look for that further protection to your labor—to the party which has proposed and given you protection for the products of your labor, or to the party which has opposed that protection and now has the boldness to declare that any protection and all protection is a violation of the constitution?" [Voices—"The Republican party?"]

A COLORED ORATOR.

The next speaker, State Senator Green, of Cleveland, Ohio, made a witty and eloquent appeal to colored men, men of his own race, to stand by the Republican party because it is the only party friend the colored men have ever had, because it has given them freedom and the ballot and is the friend of the workingman of whatever color. Senator Green was warmly applauded. There have been many requests from white men as well as colored men for a speech from Senator Green when it may be possible for him to be heard at greater length.

The chairman adjourned the meeting after calling attention to the fact that during the recent registration in this city white men known to be Democrats were listed without trouble while colored men had to swear their names on the lists.
